Washington, Aug. 19.—The fedral aid roads bill, appropriating
75,000,000 for construction, onehird of which would be immeditely available, was passed today

The good roads bill which was passed by the senate is a compromise of the Townsend bill and the house bill, said to embrace the better features of both. It is especially advantageous to the western states, especially those in which are situated large areas of the public domain which is made a factor in the apportionment of federal aid.

Telegrams received from Senators Cameron and Ashurat by the state highway department a few days ago indicated the passage of this bill before the recess, though the latter in a later dispatch feared that it would go over.

Big Break In Arizona Canal Aiding Flood In Rush Toward Phoenix

Freshened by heavy rains, Cave Creek took the bit in its teeth last night, cut a 50-foot slice out of the Arizona canal at Lateral No. 12½, one mile west of Central avenue, and at 2 o'clock this morning was taking its way into the west end of Phoenix at an eight-mile-an-hour gait. While it was impossible to gain any definite idea of the flood, officials of the Salt River Valley Water Users association were of the opinion that it was as serious as any of the rampages on which Cave Creek has gone during its unpleasant

At the present rate of its advance and if the flood does not lessen in volume, it was stated by Water Users officials last night, the water will reach the western edge of the city by 4 or 5 o'clock.

Many people living in that section of the city were warned by telephone of the coming of the flood and told to be prepared. Numerous residents dressed and took every precaution, but there was little feeling of real danger.

more than a half a mile wide and three feet deep. It seemed, according to ranchers who were watching it, to have reached its height about 11 o'clock, and to have receded a little three hours later. At least one family was caught in the flood waters at this point, but as far as could be learned, they were in no danger.

Because of the difficulty of getting accurate information from the country along the Arizona canal west of the main break, it was not known last night or early this morning whether the canal had been cut west of the lateral No. 12½, but officials of the Water Users' association, including I. M. Clausen, irrigation manager, who was in close teach with the situation during the evening, believed that the canal must have broken in several places. that the canal must have broken in several places.

Taking his cue from indications late in the afternoon, Clausen had turned the water out of the Arizona canal at 6 o'clock, so that the canal could take care of some part of the flood waters. When word of the break came every available man on the project was rushed to the scene and kept at work during the night. "The rain which was the immediate cause of the rise in Cave
